Profile

Curt's clients value his experience in large-scale, multi-party litigation as they navigate protracted disputes. The focus of Curt's litigation practice is the representation of publicly traded companies, financial institutions, universities, as well as closely-held businesses.

His work for these entities includes:

- contract disputes
- corporate ownership and control disputes
- real estate disputes
- construction and lien law disputes
- government investigations

Curtis also has experience litigating the inter-family disputes of high-net worth individuals arising in the context of guardianship proceedings, will and gift contests and estate litigation.

As a practitioner concentrating on complex corporate litigation, two of his notable cases include representation of a large commercial and investment bank in Adelphia Recovery Trust v. Bank of America, N.A., et al. and representing one of two ownership groups in Ferolito v. Vultaggio in their dispute over control of AriZona Iced Tea. In addition, Curtis has successfully represented parties in disputes arising out of construction work, including general- and sub-contractors in pay disputes, defense of a regional bank against claims of lien law diversion, prosecution of breach of fiduciary duty claims, prosecution and defense of Lanham Act false advertising claims, defense of Fair Debt Collection Practices Act claims, and assistance with regulatory compliance including compliance with data privacy and breach notification statutes.
