Profile

Jennifer is a business law attorney who counsels individuals and business entities (both publicly-traded and privately-held) on a variety of corporate and business law issues, including corporate governance, contract negotiations and regulatory compliance. She has extensive experience in representing medical device manufacturers as well as clients in the health care industry.

Jennifer represents her medical device manufacturer clients with respect to multiple facets of their operations, including sales agreements, distribution agreements, vendor agreements, agency relationships, Securities and Exchange Commission filings and related issues, and real property matters, including leases and purchases of real property.
