John's legal practice centers on estate planning, including wills and trusts, powers of attorney, health care proxies, probate and estate administration, estate litigation, guardianships, special needs planning and Medicaid planning and applications.

In addition to his estate-focused work, John brings a broad legal background and extensive experience in areas such as personal injury litigation, wrongful death claims, negotiation and settlement of disputes and interactions with various state administrative agencies. This diverse foundation allows him to offer clients comprehensive and well-rounded representation.

John is deeply committed to understanding each client's unique needs and goals. He strives to ensure that every client feels informed, comfortable and confident throughout the legal process—and ultimately satisfied with the outcome of their case.
