Profile

Sam Burgess combines his law degree with his MBA and experience so clients receive legal advice with a business perspective and a genuine interest in their business. Businesses of all types and sizes turn to Sam for assistance in a wide variety of transactions, from business formation and governance issues to mergers, acquisitions, and joint ventures, to financing and succession planning.

Sam has particular experience working with entities owned by professionals, including physicians, dentists, physical therapists, and design professionals. He assists them with their corporate transactions, including structuring their entities, growing through mergers and acquisitions, answering corporate governance and operational questions, and handling corporate reorganization, selling, and succession planning issues. He frequently assists with shareholder agreements, valuations, corporate redemptions, employee purchases, and third-party sales.

He also advises healthcare clients on regulatory issues and compliance with state and federal law, with a focus on the application of the Stark Law and the Anti-Kickback Statute. He advises all types of clients on the scope of “protected health information” and the protections necessary under the Health Insurance Portability and Accountability Act regarding the transfer and disclosure of such information. He also drafts and negotiates agreements with providers, vendors and other third parties to ensure adequate confidentiality provisions are included.
