Overview

Representing Higher Education institutions, student-athletes, and affiliated athletics entities in National Collegiate Athletic Association (NCAA) and College Sports Commission (CSC) regulations, enforcement investigations, case resolution and other athletics/eligibility matters.

Since its inception in 1991, the collegiate sports practice at Bond has been the nation's premier practice group for the representation of colleges and universities in every aspect of regulations involving the NCAA and its member schools. Our firm's experience in NCAA-related matters is unmatched, and our attorneys are the most qualified and experienced in this area of unique and complex regulations.

To remain competitive in the evolving landscape of collegiate sports, schools need an experienced, adaptive, and multi-functional team of campus and external advisors who are ready to advise and assist on a moment's notice. As the leading practice in the industry, Bond is uniquely positioned to assist clients in traditional NCAA regulatory matters; the implementation of House v. NCAA Settlement terms and its related enforcement, resolution, and arbitration processes; and the proactive development of systems needed to comply with new rules and frameworks relating to roster limits and student-athlete NIL.

In addition, Bond has several of the nation's most knowledgeable and experienced attorneys in negotiating collegiate multi-media, coaching and athletic administrator employment contracts, as well as a team of higher ed, business, intellectual property, immigration and tax attorneys who routinely assist clients in matters related to college athletics.
