TOXIC TORT AND ENVIRONMENTAL LITIGATION PRACTICE

Litigation Over Environmental Contaminants or Toxic Exposures? That's What We Do.

No one who leads a business or organization today intends to harm the environment or injure unwitting parties. Yet stringent environmental laws and regulations can impose significant liabilities and litigation costs, often for practices that were acceptable in the past. And claims alleging personal injury and/or property damage due to hazardous substances are increasingly common—potentially impacting any industry or property owner. Defending against such claims, whether justified or not, can tie up inordinate resources, threatening the viability of your business.

When an environmental claim or toxic tort allegation arises, clients need competent, affordable representation—immediately. From our nine locations across New York State, Bond, Schoeneck & King is positioned to respond quickly to a lawsuit—or to the client's discovery of a potential hazard or environmental compliance issue.

Our team at Bond is skilled in working with environmental experts to determine whether releases and exposures, including those that occurred long ago, are indeed the cause of a health problem, property damage, or environmental contamination, and whether the problem originated with your business. We explore when and where a release first occurred, how and where it spread, and who is responsible for the condition.

Decades of Experience

Bond attorneys have a track record in all matters of toxic tort and environmental litigation—in cases stemming from common-law negligence, nuisance, or trespass claims, as well as claims under legislation such as the New York Navigation Law or the federal or state Superfund laws.

Since the environmental law movement emerged in the 1970's, Bond attorneys have represented clients in civil cases brought by both governmental and private plaintiffs seeking damages, remedial action, response costs and fines; in state and federal administrative proceedings involving regulatory issues; and in criminal prosecutions for alleged violations of environmental laws.

We also specialize in defense of both property damage and personal injury complaints. Our litigators have handled cases involving residential lead paint, asbestos, toxic mold, pesticides, carbonless paper products and pharmaceuticals. We also have represented clients in matters involving carpet fibers, drywall, hair-care products and mercury, volatile organic compounds (VOC), such as TCE and its degradation products, and polychlorinated biphenyls (PCBs).

Representative Matters

Bond attorneys have defended:

- A Fortune 500 company in litigation over potential property damage and medical monitoring claims based on groundwater contamination.
- A manufacturer of hair-care products in a CERCLA cost-recovery action brought by a former affiliate--a case that involved cutting-edge CERCLA interpretations.
- A manufacturer of carbonless copy paper against claims that users suffered multiple chemical sensitivity and immune system deficiencies.
- A major manufacturer in an action brought by the State Attorney General arising from lake pollution.
- A major university in a federal enforcement action based on the regulation of asbestos under the Clean Air Act as a hazardous air pollutant.
- The former owner of a manufacturing site in an action brought by nearby residents alleging soil vapor intrusion into their homes.
- Numerous residential landlords in actions brought by former tenants, alleging poisoning from exposure to lead-based paint.
- A municipality in an Article 78 challenge to its approvals of a casino resort project under the State Environmental Quality Review Act.

Why Choose Bond?

We're responsive and trustworthy. When bad news strikes, you want immediate advocacy. We strive to answer all calls promptly, and we get to work quickly assembling the right resources to handle your matter.

We cover New York State. With nine offices across the state, we're never far from your site.

We bring a breadth of resources. When an environmental or toxic-tort claim arises, accompanying issues can arise as well—labor laws, real property concerns, contracts or environmental reviews, for example. Thanks to Bond's size and diversity of professionals, we have the experience to address multiple aspects of your case; to investigate potential problems you're not yet aware of; and to guide you to minimize the possibility of further concerns.

We're affordable. Compared to our downstate and national competitors, Bond's rates are attractive. And we've designed our teams so that your case receives ample attention from knowledgeable professionals.

We're influential and well-regarded. Our team includes a Fellow in the American College of Trial Lawyers; other Bond attorneys hold current and recent leadership positions in the New York State Bar Association's Environmental Law Section. Every year, members of our team receive peer accolades such as AV Preeminent ratings in the Martindale-Hubbell[®] system. Additional notoriety includes:

- The Best Lawyers in America[®] 2016 for Environmental Law; Litigation – Environmental; Commercial Litigation; Personal Injury Litigation – Defendants; and Product Liability Litigation – Defendants
- New York Super Lawyers 2015 for Environmental Litigation; Environmental; Business Litigation; and General Litigation
